

For progression not determined by privilege

It is essential that young people receive expert support in navigating their education and careers. This starts with sound exploration and choices, but needs to cover outstanding applications and effective transitions too. I'm particularly proud of how we've broadened our support in 2022 to meet this challenge. As always, alongside direct work with young people, we have also trained and resourced over 2,000 teachers, employers and outreach professionals who share our vision.

Outstanding outreach: Enabling students to take next steps with confidence

Developing skills through challenge-based workshops

Working with Reach PLC, home of multiple leading media brands like the Daily Mirror, we organised 3 informative workshops about the media industry, incorporating challenge tasks such as designing a marketing campaign to a brief.

"Such a great session, the kids got so involved!" - Planning Director, Reach PLC

Managing and maximising scholarships

We worked with the Janus Henderson Scholarship UK programme, managing the distribution of funding to help first-year undergraduate students facing barriers to transition successfully to Higher Education. We continue to support these students with termly check-in calls.

school and colleges engaged with online careers modules

Online learning modules for careers staff

In association with Advancing Access, we developed accessible online resources that embed a high-progression culture in schools and colleges.

Engaging resources for parents

Working with the Careers and Enterprise Company and Star Academies multi-academy trust, we created 'Let's Talk About Careers', a free resource for parents of Year 7 learners aimed at stimulating careers conversations in the home learning environment.

"We were very pleased to partner with Causeway to develop these materials. Causeway are professional & produced invaluable resources for parents/carers & young people." - Initiatives Lead, Star Academies

High quality training and consultancy: Empowering professionals

Free webinars for teachers

As part of the Sutton Trust Teacher Champions programme, we delivered a series of best-practice webinars that were free to attend for schools and 6th form colleges, aiming to support them to increase progression to competitive HE courses.

"Excellent facilitator, great resources and clear explanations!" - webinar attendee

Groundbreaking qualification for Widening Participation practitioners

The first-ever qualification of its kind, the Postgraduate Certificate in Access, Outreach and Social Mobility empowers professionals from across the sector to develop evidence-led approaches to tackling barriers to social mobility in education. In collaboration with the University of Wolverhampton and Aspire to HE.
